OUR SAN FRANCISCO DISPATCH.

Further Particulars of the Explosion.

Fragments of human remains were found scattered in many places in the junction rooms of Cobb & Linton, on the east side of Montgomery street, and were picked up in front of 8 quarts, on Lehidet street. A piece of skull was lying on California street, east of Leidsdorf. Other portions of human remains and a human arm struck the second-story window of the building across the street.

Origin of the Disaster.

Wells, Fargo & Co., who are freight agents for the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, received by the steamer Sacramento on her late trip up from Panama, a quantity of nitro-glycerine which had reached the Isthmus some time ago, consigned to Bandmann, Neilson & Co. of this city, also, two cases of the same article, but in larger sized boxes than Bandmann & Co.'s consignment. These boxes were marked plainly "Nitro-Glycerine," and the latter two—one of which was addressed to Idaho and the other to Los Angeles—were refused by the party to whom they were consigned, as they arrived in a damaged condition. Capt. Cox, Superintendent of the P. M. S. Co.'s wharf, yesterday morning about 10 o'clock, finding they were leaking, sent them down to Wells, Fargo & Co.'s office and they were placed in the court yard in the rear of the office, where the steamer freight unclaimed is usually kept. Webster, the freight clerk of Wells, Fargo & Co., sent for Haven, the freight clerk of the Steamship Company to examine the cases. Both gentlemen lunched at the Union Club and afterwards went to the courtyard. The boxes were in the yard leaking, and it is natural to suppose that in examining the box, which was not a very large one, they either kicked it or turned it over, and striking the oil on the ground, the concussion exploded the same. Both Webster and Haven were rent to pieces, showing that they must have been immediately over or near the explosive material. No other persons among the dead were so mutilated, some having their bodies filled with splinters, others their clothing burned or blown off, others receiving fractures, and Knight, from the appearance of his remains, was evidently killed by concussion. The boxes containing the nitro-glycerine which exploded were each two and a half feet in length and the superficial measurement was fourteen feet eleven inches. Only one exploded, the other being found leaking but unexploded two hours after the catastrophe.

Search for the Wounded.

Lying in the rear were three bodies—two, not recognized, were lifeless; the third, which was underneath the others, proved to be that of Garrett H. Bell, assayer and member of the Board of Supervisors, for the 8th District. Bell's features were found to be sadly mutilated and his clothing almost torn off, but he still breathed, although insensible. He was removed to Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express office, where he soon expired. Meantime the search went on, hundreds taking part, from those in the mud in the mournful work. Capt. Cox, of the Pacific Mail Co.'s line, who was in the building at the time of the explosion, sent at once for a gang of stevedors from the Mail Co.'s wharf, and the work of exhuming was thence forward carried on systematically. The mass of brick and rubbish where Wells Fargo & Co.'s kitchen had stood and where it was believed the larger number of sufferers were buried, was removed, piece by piece. As their mangled remains were brought out one after another and conveyed away on stretchers or in carriages, the scene was indescribably mournful and impressive.

Killed and Wounded.

So far as known at this time, 10, P. M., the list of killed and wounded is as follows: Employees of Wells, Fargo & Co.; Samuel Knight, Superintendent of the Banking department. He had just gone out into the yard and must have been killed instantly; T. E. Webster, head of the New York department, went out into the yard to examine the freight with Haven and Wilson Jeder the porter, and was blown to pieces. Webster was about 40 years of age and leaves a wife and two children. William Jeder the porter was killed; John McRegler and Joseph Ellis-Jeders, were in the yard or stable when the explosion occurred and were both killed; D. H. Starr, one of the cashiers, cut and bruised about the face and neck; W. J. Taylor, clerk with Wells, Fargo & Co., was also slightly hurt, but not dangerously injured. L. T. Meacham, assayer, received several cuts, and a number of clerks received some scratches. Employees of the Union Club, Felix Durwan, cook, killed; F. Rnet or F. Leony, third cook, severely, and it is thought fatally injured; W. F. Cox, steward, badly injured, supposed to be beyond recovery; Chinese assistant, name unknown, missing; another Chinese assistant, name unknown, killed; John Maguire, waiter, missing. J. H. Wright, waiter, missing; Wm. Smith, waiter, leg broken, will recover; Dennis O'Brien, waiter, missing; James Burke, waiter, missing. We learn the names of other persons as follows: G. H. Bell, assayer, who had just stepped out to see to look at his horse which was driven out of the yard, on this way to the Potrero by a groom, not an instant before the explosion. Wm. all. Haven, book keeper in the P. M. S. S. Co.'s office, killed; H. Blum, clerking for and joining the express office, somewhat injured against the face; Fred. Lowe, badly injured; Frank Morris, working for Bell & Co., badly cut about the head; Elliott Aher, workman, badly cut; A. Hayward, proprietor of the Amador mine, slightly injured; W. A. Lamb, assayer for Bell, badly but not dangerously cut and contused. A large number of people were at lunch in the Union Club dining hall, the doors and windows of which were driven in and the furniture destroyed, but none were dangerously injured. The billiard room was a mass of ruins, but no one was killed in it, and the escape of so many who were near it, due to the force of the shock is astonishing. The light yellow smoke ascended to an immense height into the air. The smell of gas was perceptible to the city front. The bodies were all torn and mutilated by splinters, but not burned, and last slightly blackened. The effect produced was entirely unlike that of an explosion of gunpowder or steam. It resembled more that of a stroke of lightning. The flag on City Hall is at half mast, and the whole community seems in mourning.

The Boltors of 1858 don't want to Bolt Now.

There are no sore heads in the Democratic party. Democrats battle for principles, not for men; for reason and truth and justice, not for spoils and lusts.—Con. dorate Democrat

If there are no soreheads in the Democratic party what was the matter with Dennis O'Meara and Issachar Kelly in 1858? In that year these worthies bolted the regular party and nominations, and run as the "sore-head" Abolition candidates for Printer and Congress. If their heads were then not sore, what was the matter with them? If they did not bolt for spoils, what did they bolt for? Certainly not for "truth and justice," although it may have been for a "reason." And that reason was generally considered to be an "ism," and an "ism" of a very selfish and narrow kind—O'Mearaism and Kellyism. They wanted "spoils" and position more than the party wanted them, and so they "soreheaded"—bolted—affiliated with the Abolitionists, ran on a ticket with them and solicited their votes. But now O'Meara is nominated on the "regular" ticket and wants to jump that game, so he attempts to drive his dissatisfied Confederates to the polls with the shout: "There are no soreheads in the Democratic party." They care nothing about "spoils," and don't bolt, no difference who is nominated. Oh, no! Don't bolt, brethren; do as I say, not as I did. The boot is on the other leg now.

State Items.

The organization of the Oregon City Paper Manufacturing Company was perfected on the 18th inst. by the election of Directors and the adoption of by-laws. The Directors are Messrs. W. W. Buck, J. D. Miller, A. Myers, Jacob Wortman and J. Ralston. We are informed that the Company has already purchased the necessary machinery, and that it is now in San Francisco. The building for the factory is to be commenced at once and completed by the 1st of September. The location is one block below the woolen factory, and the power—water—comes from the P. T. Company's basin. The Directors are to meet on the 21st to elect officers.

Of the twenty-one criminal cases on the Circuit Court docket of Wasco, for trial at the court now sitting, five have been dismissed, seven continued, and one found "not guilty."

Among the plans for providing protection against the Indians on the Canyon City road, is one to raise by subscription a bounty fund for those who may go out to fight the Indians, besides giving them all the property they may capture and a premium for scalps. Another plan is to arm and mount a band of Warm Spring Indians, and turn them loose among the Snakes. Meantime, the hostile Indians are having a regular holiday of it, probably, when the cavalry, which is soon to start over the road, arrives near the scene of present depredations, the Indians will be out of that country, and will return when the troops shall have passed through.

The Mountaineer states that Mr. Calloy who, on behalf of the citizens of the Dalles, called on Gen. Steele, a few days since, to lay before him the condition of things in the Canyon City road, and to ask for military protection, makes known the following as the result of his interview: The General stated that he had no troops which he could put upon the road at present; that General Halleck, the Division Commander, had given orders which would occupy all the troops now in or expected to come to this Department. The two companies of cavalry now at Vancouver will go to Boise as soon as they can be mounted and equipped, and probably will go over the Canyon City road. This was the most that the General could promise. Gen. Grant had told Gen. Steele, previous to the latter's departure for this coast, that a whole regiment of cavalry would be sent to this department, and in that event a sufficient number could probably be spared to keep the Canyon City road open; until then, it was likely we would have to look for protection to the cavalry now at Watson, and a company of infantry to come to Watson from Camp Wright, which is to be abandoned.

The city authorities of Salem, have determined upon constructing three cisterns of large capacity, besides rebuilding the old one, to supply water for use of the Fire Department. At present there is scarcely any portion of the city where enough water can be had to extinguish an ordinary fire.

Washington Territory Items.

The Seattle Tri-Weekly says Superintendent Haines has placed operators on San Juan and Lopez Islands, in readiness for duty as soon as the sub-marine cable shall be laid down.

The same paper says of the Snohomish and Snoqualmie vallies that, they comprise a large extent of as fine agricultural country as any in the Territory, and will undoubtedly attract a large number of settlers the coming summer. With that country's advantages a large amount of business must necessarily result on those rivers to supply the demands of the growing settlements.

The Government charge, called stumpage, against logging and mill men, for cutting timber on Government lands, has been reduced to $1 per thousand feet

EXPLAINED.—The Washington Standard strongly supports "Moses" Johnson, the man who would force rebels into Congress, and fiercely denounces the loyal Senators and Representatives who are determined to keep them out. As the Standard professes to be a Union paper par excellence, it puzzles some who happen to read it to know why it takes this course. Did these persons never see at the head of its leading column the words "U. S Official Paper for the Territory?"

THE REASON.—Our benevolent neighbor of the Herald says that he sent a great many nice edibles to his friends at Vicksburg during the siege of that city, but that his friends did not get them. We suppose their failure to receive these most excellent gifts is to be attributed to the difficulty of passing our lines so as to reach the city where his needy friends resided

The Overland Stage Line has reduced the fares from Salt Lake City to Atchison to $250, Legal Tenders, instead of $300 as heretofore and from Salt Lake City to Denver City, $150, instead of $200, Legal Tenders

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO APRIL 16.

Trial of the Monster Lee Concluded—Conviction Certain.

CHICAGO April 17.—The evidence for the prosecution in the case of Major Gen. Robert Johnson Lee, on trial before a military commission at Raleigh, North Carolina, has closed, and the examining [illegible] makes conviction with the death penalty certain. When the President's peace proclamation reached Raleigh his counsel demanded his discharge and filing that in a writ of Habeas corpus from the Supreme Court which Gen Rogers refused to obey.

U S Squadron for Pacific and Indian Oceans.

The New York Tribune says the navy department is about organizing a squadron for the South Pacific and Indian ocean. The former consisted of 17 vessels with the Powhatan as flag ship and the latter of 4 vessels.

The New York Times Washington correspondent says no private expressed that Mr Collfax in his speech the other night, placed much stress on the fact that an extra session of Congress was not called, nor more than it is well known that Mr Colfax himself advised with Mr Fine [illegible] on the subject and did not seem greatly urging on Mr Johnson the necessity of calling Congress together.

Congressional.

There is not even a guess as to when the House will proceed to consider the resolution admitting Tennessee nor is it known that the committee have matured any measure with regard to the late rebellious States, in addition to those already reported. The committee continue to examine witnesses and enough testimony has been collected to make several pondorous volumes. It is not all printed yet, though ordered to be.

The Herald's Washington correspondent says that Senator Stewart, of Nevada, seems to be very uneasy to display great in discretion on the reconstruction question—a labor which he has entirely assumed to himself. This morning (13th inst) there being a large gathering in the gallery to listen to the eulogies on the late Senator Foot, the Nevada Senator seized the opportunity to offer a resolution. The Senator has a peculiar knack of selecting important occasions for the introduction of his measures, and from all appearances must keep a stock of resolutions, amendments and substitutes on hand for such chances as the question is not exhausted up there will be some difficulty in finding a way out of the maze of propositions already booked for consideration.

The joint resolution protesting against the pardoning of criminals by foreign powers on condition that they emigrate to the United States, passed both houses, and will be committed to all foreign powers; although particularly called out by the action of the Swiss government

Cholera Mortality at Halifax.

HALIFAX, April 14.—The city medical officer reports up to last evening 170 deaths among the passengers of the steamer England, including 40 of who died on the passage from Liverpool. He reports the disease probably as a severe type of ship fever, with many prominent symptoms of cholera. It amounts to a regular plague. The surviving passengers are being removed—some to Her Majesty's receiving ship, and others to tents on the shore. The disease apparently decreasing. The number of deaths were greatly reduced to-day, and the disease is confined to the steerage passengers

Protection on the Plains

CHICAGO, April 15.—General Sherman says the route over the plains from Omaha via Fort Kearney, McPherson and Laramie, will be guarded by regular troops, and that he will attempt to have the new road pretty well guarded by the Big Cheyenne, north of the Black Hills to the Pawnee fork, intersecting other roads to the head waters of the Yellowstone, and will also guard as well as possible the Missouri river route. He says he can not undertake to guard the Nebraska route.

Appointments—The Freedmen—Rebel Candidates in New Orleans.

CHICAGO, April 15.—Gen. B. Wright, of Ohio, has been confirmed by the Senate Indian Agent of Montana.

The surplus freedmen at Washington and vicinity are being rapidly sent South under labor contracts executed through the Freedmen's Bureau. About five hundred hired themselves last Monday, at wages ranging from $15 to $30 per month and board

Gen Harry Hayes, who commanded the Louisiana brigade under Stonewall Jackson has received the Democratic nomination for Sheriff of New Orleans, the most lucrative office in the State. The election comes off on the 17th of May

An Effort for the Release of the Notorious Dick Turner.

The counsel of Dick Turner, the notorious keeper of Libby prison, is in Washington City trying to secure the release of his client from imprisonment.

Report of the New Overland Mail Denied.

The Herald's correspondent denies the report of an overland mail contract with Sen. Holliday via Smoky Hill route.

Further Congressional News.

The following Territorial business, transacted in Congress on Thursday, the 12th, has not previously been reported:

In the House, Mr. Rice, of Maine, from the committee on territories, reported a bill providing that any loyal citizen who shall establish an artesian well on any mail routes of New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, or the Colorado Desert of Colorado, at the last two miles distant from any spring or stream of living water on such route, shall be entitled to one section of public land embracing such well.

Mr. Washburne, of Illinois, said there was a cat under the meal tub, and characterized it as a game of speculation to get town sites.

Mr. Rice said the bill originated with the commissioners of the general land office.

The bill was finally reconsidered

Mr. Rice also reported adversely on the memorial of the Arizona Legislature asking a grant of land on the banks of the Colorado river, to be located by the Territory.

Mr. Garvin, of New York, from the committee on territories, reported adversely on the memorial of the Utah Legislature for an appropriation to construct roads.

Mr. Moulton, of Illinois, from the same committee, reported a bill appropriating $10,000 for a survey of the boundary between Idaho and Oregon, which was referred to the committee of the whole.

Mr. Starr, of New Jersey, from the same committee, reported adversely on the memorial of the Utah Legislature asking an appropriation for a library at Salt Lake

Washington News.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—There are on file in the War Department from seven to eight thousand applications from officers in the volunteer service for positions in the new regiments embraced under the army bill now pending in congress.

Several presidents temporarily dropped during the more exciting discussion on the freedmen's bill and the civil rights bill, are now being again agitated. Among these are the Mexican question and our relations with France. There appears to be a growing conviction that Napoleon has no intention of withdrawing the French troops from Mexico, so long as our government maintains its present wavering attitude.

The President's peace proclamation has given rise to unlooked for complications. It had no sooner reached various headquarters in the South, than both from the commanding officers and agents of the freedmen's bureau distressful reports poured in upon the civil power, which indicate the inauguration of a very unpleasant state of affairs between the civil and military authorities throughout the South. The result has been that it was found necessary to send orders and circulars, both from General Grant and General Howard's headquarters, affirming that the proclamation did not change the relations between the civil and military authorities in the least.

The President has appointed S. G. Courtney U. S District attorney of New York, vice Daniel Dickinson, deceased. Mr. Courtney is Mr. Dickinson's son-in-law.

Case in Indiana under the Civil Rights Law.

CHICAGO, April 16th.—Judge Test, in the Circuit Court of Lafayette county, Indiana, decided that the amendment to the United States Constitution abolishing slavery makes all negroes citizens, and therefore the 13th Section of the Indiana constitution and the black laws are void. The question came before him on an appeal of a colored citizen to enforce a contract, claiming the benefits of the civil rights act. Judge Test says without reference to the civil rights act, I shall sustain the demurrer to the defendant's answer, being fully satisfied that the plaintiff is a citizen of the United States, independent of the act of Congress on that subject.

The Tennessee legislature on Saturday, expelled James R. Hood, conservative member from Chattanooga, for having actively instigated the late revolutionary proceedings, without resigning himself. Chattanooga will elect a radical member to fill the vacancy

Launching of the Steamship Oregonian.

CHICAGO, April 16th.—The steamship Oregonian, built by Messrs. Lawrence & Foulke of New York, for Ladd & Bradford, and intended to run between San Francisco and Portland was launched on Friday, the 13th instant. She is not expected to be ready for her trial trip for three months.

Returns from the Oregon City Land Office

The Commissioner of the General Land Office has received returns from the Oregon City land office, showing that 6,360 acres were entered for actual settlement in February, while preliminary evidences of title were submitted, covering 12,000 acres of donation lands for actual settlement.

Massachusetts Bounties to California Soldiers.

The Massachusetts Senate had considerable debate during several days last week on a proposition to pay bounties to the California battalion of the 21 Massachusetts regiment. It was decided that inasmuch as had been done those soldiers because they had the option of transportation or bounty, and chose the former, besides, no State bounties were paid at that time. Resolutions however, were offered and passed, paying $50 to each member of companies E, F, I, and M, who were, at the time of enlistment, residents of California, but credited on the quota of Massachusetts

Seward Iels his Axe Fall.

Secretary Seward discontinued the publication of the United States laws in the Wilmington, Del Journal and Statesman, that paper having charged him with malicious intent to break up the Republican party in revenge for disappointed ambition.

The National Democratic Association fired of Johnson.

CHICAGO, April 16th.—The National Democratic Association at Washington, has resolved to have nothing to do with or attempt to get up a Johnson party, but to maintain their own organization intact

Tim Florence, manager of the 22d of February demonstration, addressed the Association, saying that he was compelled to say that the President has not shown sufficient gratitude to those who had stood by him

Saulsbury of Delaware followed in an address of the most bitter character, saying he was tired of supporting a man who would not help himself or show thankfulness for support. He was a warm personal friend of the President, but if Johnson wants to do right, it was time for him to show it. He said further that the President had scarcely a Republican member of Congress to support his measures, and the Democrats were sick of doing his work for nothing

An Unfortunate Argument.

Montgomery Blair's late political manifesto excites little attention. The National Intelligencer thinks that portion of the argument unfortunate which would excuse the Southern people because of certain acts of the outgoing and hooming administration

The Verdict of the People

The Albany Acessity Journal says it is a fact worthy of note, that in all recent elections State or local, the Republican party has been strongest who the issues were most plainly made, and there is no mistaking the popular verdict in favor of sustaining the party in Congress.

Democratic Machief Makers.

The New York Times says Strongly as we felt constrained to censure the course pursued by the radicals in Congress, we appreciated the mischief they have actually done is less than that arising from the counsels and conduct of those who claim to be the particular friends of the South. The lessons inculcated by such journals as the News and World are operating [illegible] in all the temper of [illegible] others to [illegible] which will not be granted and to indulge in exhibitions gratifying to none but Thad Stevens and his fellows.

The Spanish and the South American War

CHICAGO, April 16.—The New York Herald of April 14th says: The Spaniards, despairing of their ability to continue the war in the South Pacific, have resolved on the bombardment of Valparaiso, after which they will abandon the war against the allies and withdraw. The Herald says this news came by the last [illegible] steamer and that a Chilean bearer of dispatches left New York immediately for Aspinwall with the important intelligence Strike Among the Car Drivers.

The car drivers on the street railroads have been on a strike for several days and the roads are idle. Front is unchanged

Congressional News.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—In the House, McKee of Kentucky offered a resolution which was adopted requesting the President to communicate the correspondence with the French Government since the message of January 6th in regard to the withdrawal of the French troops from Mexico

Hitchcock of Nebraska introduced a bill for the removal of the office of Surveyor General of the District of Iowa to Platte county, Nebraska

Ingersoll of Illinois offered a resolution instructing the Committee on the District of Columbia to inquire into the expediency of establishing eight hours as a legal day's work in the District. Wilson of Iowa said the Judiciary Committee had the subject under consideration. Ingersoll said that was for Government employees, this was for all classes in the District. Farnsworth of Illinois moved to lay the resolution on the table. Negatived—Ayes 58 to 54 nays. The morning hour having expired, the resolution was laid over until next Monday

Secretary Seward having declined the purchase of copies of the Daily Chronicle for our Legation abroad, Stevens of Pennsylvania offered a resolution that the Senate and House furnish three copies of that paper to each of our Foreign Legations in Canada and Commercial Agents, paying for the same out of the contingent fund. Hale of New York raised the point that this was a proposition to devote a portion of the contingent fund to a purpose entirely outside of the organization and duties of Congress. The Speaker overruled the point. Rogers of New Jersey objected to the introduction of the resolution. Stevens moved to suspend the rules for the purpose. Ayes 99. In the Senate Ramsey, of Minnesota, introduced a bill for the establishment of offices for melting, assaying and stamping gold and silver at Albany, Oregon; Tucson Arizona, Austin, Nevada; Santa Fe New Mexico; Salt Lake, Utah; Boise City, Idaho; Virginia City, Montana, and Dunleith, Minnesota. Option is given the miner to receive his gold in bars or ingots, or to exchange it for gold notes payable at San Francisco or Philadelphia. Stewart, of Nevada offered a joint resolution to discontinue the branch mint of New Orleans and transfer its machinery to Nevada.

In the course of a debate on a resolution relating to the Sioux City and Pacific Railroad, McDougall, of California charged Conness with having a personal interest in the matter, and with discussing it without regard to the common interest. Conness excitedly pronounced what McDougall had said false. A long controversy ensued between Conness and McDougall, in which highly exciting words were used. McDougall was several times called to order. Conness said that Senator McDougall does not represent the people of California either politically or morally. He was outvoted[illegible] by the State five years ago, since when he has not returned to see his constituents. I have not in my place when the Senator, so far from representing that high-toned constituency, was rather lying in his chair, the object of pity before the audience. I have from every State of the Union. I have covered my eyes more than once before this spectacle. I was biding the time when McDougall by the termination of his career, should cease to disgrace the Senate. It was not enough that he should be excluded from the committees, that silent but positive condemnation. Having no character to lose and nothing to sacrifice by controversy, he rises and commits a last offense." Johnson, of Maryland, suggested that it would be better to discontinue a discussion of this kind. McDougall said he would be more respectful in his language than his colleague, which he would not speak of as a slave, but as a negro. Saulsbury, McDougall proceeded to illustrate by an anecdote, in which the words "God d—d son of a bitch" occurring. Vice President Foster checked him, and the colloquy ended

The Steamer "England" Case.

HALIFAX April 16.—Not a single case of sickness has occurred among the cabin passengers of the steamer England.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The President to-day nominated to the Senate for confirmation, Henry A Smyth, President of the Central Railroad Bank, as Collector of the Port of New York. Florence journals declare that no military preparations are being made in Italy, beyond the ordinary requirements of the service.

It is stated that the French troops will be withdrawn from Mexico in three detachments. The first in next November, the second detachment in March, 1867, and the third, in November, 1867.

French troops have been ordered into camp at Charlestons two months earlier than usual; giving rise to a report that France intends to form an army of observation on the Rhine frontier.

Hong Kong advices to March 5th, says the tea season had closed. The total exports were 114,000,000 lbs.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The Saxonia has arrived from Hamburg, via Southampton. March 4—Consols closed at 89⅝@89¾. 5-20's 71½@71¾. Rentes 67

The Times' city article says: The English funds advanced in consequence of the less threatening accounts from Germany, coupled with a rumor of mediation. The anticipation of war between Austria and Prussia had made at least unfavorable impression on commercial affairs throughout France. The anxiety, instead of being dispelled, by an elaborate article in the Constitutionnel, which is said to have emanated from the foreign office, has increased. There is an apprehension that if these Powers go to war, France cannot, even if she would, maintain a neutrality

The Prussian note to the minor states says: Austria, without any provocation on the part of Prussia, has ordered armaments of a threatening character, which compels Prussia to arms. Prussia now seeks guarantees for her security, having duly endeavored to obtain them in alliance with Austria. Baron Blanneck asks the support of the minor states in the event of being attacked by Austria, or compelled to make war

Vienna papers say war is inevitable, and that an attempt will be made to make over minor states to Prussia.

Austria has called in soldiers on furlough

Several minor states have resolved on neutrality

The Austrian Embassador at Berlin had presented dispatches declaring that the designs of Austria were peaceful, and that its military preparations were made with no hostile intent, and that the Imperial Government was determined, under all circumstances, to abide by its duty under the federal compact. Hope was expressed that the Prussian Government would feel at liberty to give similar assurance to Austria.

A Berlin telegram says: It is believed that in reply to the dispatch of the Austrian Embassador, Prussia will state that she has no intention of following an offensive policy, but would desire an explanation respecting the arming of Austria

A Vienna letter says: Arrangements are made so that Austria can mobilize 485,000 men within a fortnight. Austria has prohibited the exportation of horses.

A Florence telegram announces the formation of a camp of 70,000 men under Gen. Cialdini and the principal Generals were summoned to meet them on the 6th. An Adriatic squadron is forming to cruise on the Adriatic. On the contrary, a letter denies the story of three armaments and also that an understanding has been agreed on between Italy and Prussia

The Italian official Gazette publishes a contract, concluded between Portugal, France, Brazil and Italy, for a telegraph to America.

Shanghae advices, March 6th, say the Imperialists had gained a great victory over the rebels in the north. Over 5,000 of the latter are said to have been slaughtered or captured

New Brunswick News.

CHICAGO April 16.—The Fenian hubbub at Eastport, Calais, and other towns on the New Brunswick border continues largely to occupy the dispatches with mysterious movements no sooner reported than denied

There is a crisis in New Brunswick Politics and the ministry, supported by a parliamentary majority hostile to confederation, has been called to resign by action of the Governor, so that this Province, hitherto the most decided against confederation, is now in a fair way to yield its assent

There being a large land force of British troops with three large war vessels on the lookout to prevent a breach of the neutrality laws, there is no danger to be apprehended and the Fenian mystery finds an easy solution in the political events at Fredericton

UNSUCCESSFUL INDIAN HUNT

Capt Collins and Dr Cochrane arrived from Camp Lyon yesterday. They left Capt Walker at that place. He will soon be back at Fort Boise. He did not, this time, meet with so good success as before in killing Indians. They appear to have left the range of their late depredations to attack some other point, or to return when there shall be a less vigilant watch.

FEARFULLY BAD ROADS

The roads to Idaho City have been fearfully bad for the last ten days. The road company have over forty men at work now improving the damages made by the late freshets, and promise to put the stages through next Monday. Passengers are now taken from Payette to Placerville by pack trains part of the way, and in sleighs over six miles of snow.

The committee on streets and public property having examined the remonstrance to the proposed McAdamizing of Second street, and reported that the Nicolson pave [illegible] the preference of the adjacent property owners [illegible] did that notice be authorized for the proposed [illegible] of that street by the last named method, which was adopted. [Notice appears in another column]

The [illegible] were authorized in favor of J H Parry & Co for the sum of $1,680, the contract price for McAdamizing Main street in front of blocks 214, 176 and 17"

The Police committee reported an opinion of the City Attorney relative to the opening of streets in the first ward, west of Seventh street, and North of Stark [illegible] which sets forth that streets can only be opened as laid out under the provisions of an Act of the State Legislature passed December 19th, 1865, there not appearing [illegible] of streets in the city in the tract in ques [illegible] The report was adopted, and the opinion placed on file.

The same committee reported in reference to the Park [illegible] submitting a statement of the City Attorney, in which he [illegible] great pride was wanting to show that the [illegible] Abigail Nacey Lowndsley were binding to the city, and the decision of the Circuit Court, in the case of Gilfillan vs. the City Corporation, which would probably govern the city in the matter of quieting titles. The report was accepted and placed on file.

Upon the matter of the removal of obstructions to A street, the City Attorney also made a statement which was published by the Judiciary Committee, showing that the weight of opinion arises from the difference of surveys, and that this street will have to be determined by an action. It was suggested that the survey of [illegible] be adopted, and that the obstructions be removed by the Marshal. The subject was referred to the committee on streets and public property

An Ordinance entitled "An Ordinance for the benefit of the Fire Department," was read once and laid upon the table. The provisions of this Ordinance are something in addition to the present quarterly appropriation of $1 75 quarterly per member to each [illegible] of laws governing a paid fire department, allowing $1 75 quarterly per member to each [illegible]

The following Ordinances were passed: An Ordinance authorizing contracts for repairs to water cisterns on the line of the First street improvement An Ordinance appropriating $300 for the purchase and erection of four [illegible] on First street, at Oak, Morrison, Taylor and [illegible] street corners. The Home Made Work.—Without attempting [illegible] the merits of any one of our [illegible] men, who devote the city home machines, and a desire to [illegible] resources developed, we must be allowed to state a fact which has been substantiated by repeated [illegible] steam boilers and machinery [illegible] much inferior to that class of work usually [illegible] When Mr. Vaughn built his new flouring mill, [illegible] New York, for his boiler and engines. [illegible] this city the boiler, it was found, would [illegible] he was obliged to have one made to order, and [illegible] to boiler on his hands. The engines [illegible] by overhauling [illegible] of the Portland [illegible] On another occasion a boiler, shipped from [illegible] river to Idaho, by a New York company, was [illegible] and one was made in Portland to take [illegible] the poor concern. Yesterday a third boiler, [illegible] from the East, was found lacking the requisite [illegible] upon the application of the test in this city. We [illegible] these facts for the benefit of our home mechanics, [illegible] as just, have not been found wanting in any [illegible] required of them, especially when called to [illegible] and boilers, or make a stage coach, [illegible] or whatever article they are engaged [illegible]

New Lodge.—Mr. A. L. Stinson of Salem, M. W. Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of I. O. O. F., for this [illegible] arrived from Vancouver by the steamer Fannie Troup, on Friday, accompanied by a number of the fraternity, where they had been for the purpose of forming a new lodge, which was effected on Tuesday night. The officers of the Vancouver lodge are: N. G., H. K. Hines; V. G., L. F. Robinson; Secretary, G. S. McConnell; Treasurer, Levi Dentzich. The prospects are fair for a good lodge. Meetings at present will be held in Masonic [illegible]

The Latest Style.—And it will always find the Oregonian on their side. We endeavor to keep them posted as to the fashions. Up to date have adopted the "Whitsett" as the name for the substitute to the "Waterbitt." The "Rivulet" is worn by those who have enough of their own grown hair to allow it to trail behind naturally or hang in curls. The "Printer" of all the hats on the [illegible] called by "Hare hare at once," or the Fright on legs! The variegated colors of hair so [illegible] were of late, in fact sing in popularity. Red, [illegible] and dark brown [illegible] exceedingly.

Gone.—The versatile telegraph operator, Mr. Ware, [illegible] of his accomplishments to good account. Assistants, Germans, French, Indians and Chinese could all learn from "characters" on the bulletin board [illegible] evening at 9 o'clock, that the steamship had [illegible] as passing Monticello. Ward says [illegible] were all genuine and the sentences veritable [illegible] all but the words "no steamer," in Chinese, [illegible], but the remarks were productions of [illegible] genius, and true assertions of his talent.

A quantity of cigars were taken charge of [illegible] day, at a private house in the Third Ward of the city, by Deputy Collector Baskerville, of the United States Internal Revenue office, for an attempted evasion of the laws of Congress by the owner of the article. The officers of the Government are determined to act peremptorily in all matters of this character coming to their notice, and they have taken steps to detect parties engaged in the [illegible]

Gone.—Williams.—A private letter, written by [illegible] Collins to a friend in this city, speaks in the highest terms of Oregon's Senator, Judge George H. Williams. The people of this State have a live representative, and one that is both fearless and influential at Washington, in the [illegible]

Gone to the Asylum.—The young man about whom so much excitement arose near Umatilla lately, who [illegible] had the hanging of Mr. Stoughton by a mob, has been committed to the Asylum as a private patient, [illegible] insane. He was accompanied to this city by his father and brother, arriving by the Alert from Oregon City yesterday afternoon

Brewster's Opera.—Hopeman J. April 13th, 1866. Jones and Dougherty $5 each, with costs, paid for having [illegible] in a set to at the Main street Magnolia ... Will Mahaffey, drunk, sent to jail for two days ... Several cases for violation of the license law, are docketed for consideration to-day.

Fire Alarm.—A burning chimney, in one of the wood [illegible] on structures on the levee, between Alder and Morrison streets, called the firemen of the city out last evening in great haste, in a terrific rainstorm.

The Gambler.—Mr. Atkinson is busily employed in [illegible]ing the city with one of Crawford's machines [illegible] called upon.

Valuable and Convenient.—"Brown's Bronchial Troches" are widely and favorably known as a remedy for [illegible] Coughs, Hoarseness, Coughs, and other troubles of the Throat and Lungs They are of great value for the purposes for which they are designed, while they are usually [illegible] efficacious, they contain no hurtful ingredients, but may at all times be used with perfect safety — [illegible]

Another Explosion—Six Men Killed.

Calpax Cal., April 17th—9 P M.—A terrible explosion occurred at Camp Nine near Cold Run on the line of the Pacific Railroad. Six men were killed three white and three black. The foreman, J Hegan was blown to pieces and part of his body found. One man was thrown 40 feet into the air and 100 feet from the blast. The blast had been [illegible] and while reloading [illegible] and blast, the explosion took place. No further particulars

Further Particulars of the Disaster.

San Francisco April 19.—The ruins of the walls which were shattered by the late explosion have nearly all been cleared away, but no more human remains have been found except an arm which was identified from the rubbish this morning. J H Wright, who was yesterday reported as missing is alive. He is terribly cut and bruised but will be out in a few days. There is now only one person at Hinaman, missing from the fact that no remains were found in the cook room where he is supposed to have been at the time of the explosion. It is thought he escaped unhurt and has not since made his appearance. The Board of Supervisors on Monday night adopted a resolution empowering and ordering the Chief of Police to search out all the Nitro Glycerine Oil anywhere in the City and County of San Francisco and destroy the same. Chief Burke, notified Boadman, Dodson & Co. of his instructions and intention to destruction to the very letter, and they accordingly applied to the Fifteenth District Court for an injunction to restrain him in carrying out such intention. In their complaint they allege that they have for some time past been sole agents for this state of a newly invented material for blasting purposes.

The matter was brought before Judge Cowles, who issued a restraining order, directing Chief Burke, his employees, agents servants and subordinates to refrain from destroying, interfering with or molesting the property described in the complaint as 900 pounds of nitro-glycerine or glonoil, stowed as therein described, or any part thereof, or committing any other injury. The matter will be brought before the board of supervisors again next Monday evening, when other measures will be taken in regard to the storage and transportation of the dangerous material, to provide against accidents in the future.

Sailing of Steamers.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Sacramento sailed for Panama at 11 o'clock A M to-day, with about 500 passengers and $650,000 in treasure.

The steamship Montana yesterday took away 342 passengers, many of whom were bound to the Idaho mines

The case of Lambert and McElroy, who are under arrest, charged with having robbed Collector Adams, of Astoria, of $31,000 in gold, on board the steamer Oregon, last December, is under investigation before the United States Grand Jury The robbery having been committed on the high sea, the offense is cognizable only in the United States District Court.

The Warning Dream.

The following story I have often heard narrated by an intimate friend of my father's a gentleman upon whose judgment and veracity, I can rely with perfect confidence He was an officer in the army and the circumstances occurring upwards of forty years ago upon his returning with his regiment to England after an absence of long duration He was obliged to repair to London immediately after his arrival, whence he purposed setting off to the north of England, where his family was then residing After many delays, occasioned by business at the War Office he concluded his arrangements and determined to leave town on the 3d of November

The night preceding his departure arrived, and he fell asleep in excellent health and spirits but awoke from his slumber in the uttermost horror for he had been disturbed by a dream, whose dreadful subject was heightened by a minuteness and circumstantiality seldom to be observed in those "fickle pensioners of Morpheus' train It was some minutes before he could recollect himself or feel assured that he was actually in safety but at length, recalling his weakened energies he smiled at his vain fears, and once more composed himself to rest He slept, and again the same vision appeared to him, with added terror

He thought that he was traveling through a beautiful country, fresh with verdure and rich in cultivation when, as he journeyed on, rejoicing in the hilarity which shone around him, the prospect became suddenly changed, the green hills and smiling valleys were transformed to a bleak and barren heath, dark clouds obscured the heavens, and night suddenly came on Presently he reached a building, which, at first, bore the appearance of a church but, as he approached nearer, proved to be an inn He entered the gate which led to the house, but found the greatest difficulty in proceeding. Sometimes his feet seemed fastened to the ground, and a hundred times he stumbled over impediments which appeared to lie in his path, the nature of which he was prevented by the darkness from discovering Still, with that blindness and obstinacy which usually characterize the dreamer, he continued to advance, until at last, the moon shining out he found himself standing alone in a churchyard, and casting his eyes upon a gravestone before him Colonel Burton beheld his own name sculptured on the marble

Struck with surprise, he looked again, but it was no longer there; and, passing through the churchyard, which now offered no obstruction to his steps, he entered the inn The vision then became confused, and nothing was clearly defined, until he found himself in his chamber. Here a sensation of fear seemed to hang upon him, and he was oppressed by the feeling of intense expectation, so often experienced in dreams. Still the churchyard appeared as a prominent feature in the scene. The room seemed surrounded with windows, yet all presented the same ghastly spectacle, of graves and tombstones, gleaming white in the moonshine; which seemed, as he gazed upon them, to gape beneath his eyes. At last he went to bed, but scarcely had he laid his head upon the pillow, when the door of his chamber was slowly opened, and he beheld a figure in whom he recognized the landlord of the inn, advancing toward him with a knife in his hand, followed by another holding a lantern. Agonized by fear, the dreamer strove to shriek for help and mercy, but his tongue, refusing to perform its office, clave to the roof of his mouth. At this crisis his agitation awoke him, and he found himself sitting upright in his bed, cold drops were hanging on his brow, and he trembled as if in an ague-fit; nor were his feelings much less unpleasing after the first agitation had subsided

The churchyard and the dagger still haunted his imagination, and, as he lay in silent darkness, a thousand different ideas arose in his remembrance, of travelers who had fallen by the hands of assassins, and others who had strangely disappeared from the highway, and whose fate was yet shrouded in silence and mystery In justice to Colonel Burton's character, which might otherwise suffer in the reader's, estimation from his indulging ideas so little consonant with his reputation as a soldier, I must remind him that, at the period of my narrative, traveling did not possess all the ease and accommodation it now enjoys. Stage-coaches were yet in their infancy, the inns had sometimes a very ill name; the roads were bad, and occasionally haunted by those who scrupled not at saying, "Stand or a true man," so that a long journey was then regarded, as a matter not only of consequence, but of hazard. In these days of peaceful traveling and "genteel accommodation for man and horse," some ridiculous wight, justly pitied by himself, whose sleep would be disturbed by an approaching journey, but fifty years ago people might have dreamed of being murdered in the road between London and York, without incurring the charge of unreasonable timidity.

To return to my narrative, Colonel Burton, rousing himself from these sombre meditations, made a solemn resolution to "dream no more," and falling into a peaceful and undisturbed slumber, he awoke next morning without a trace of the childish feelings which had so lately agitated him. The information he received on arising, however, did not increase the exhilaration, he had determined to make the journey on horseback, attended by a favorite servant, but, to his great vexation, he found that the man had been taken seriously ill in the course of the night, and was now totally unable to proceed. There was not time to procure another attendant, and he was therefore obliged to advance alone.

Colonel Burton set off. The inn of his companion at first threw a gloom over his spirits, but the beauty of the morning and the gayety of the scene soon restored the mind to its wonted serenity, and he rode gayly along, enjoying the fresh air and the bright sunshine. He passed the city and saw the appearance of the country, and all the thousand enchantments which even the chill wind and almost lifeless branches of November can confer, were his. The tenderest feelings arose in his mind, and he anticipated his approaching happiness in a reunion with the beloved society he had been so long estranged from; and it was not until some time after the commencement of his journey that his thoughts reverted to the dream which had so fearfully disturbed him the preceding night. He smiled at the recollection of his terrors, and wondered how he could have been so strongly affected; yet, notwithstanding the contempt, and even shame, with which he now regarded his foolish terrors, he could not dwell upon the circumstances of the vision without a certain sensation of awe, nor prevent a secret hope that his lodging for the next night might not border upon a churchyard. Nay, he even determined that this should not happen, and that he would cautiously avoid every inn from which a tombstone should be visible. Not that he was by any means superstitious, on the contrary, he knew few people so free from credulity as himself; he only avoided a fulfilment of the dream so far, lest, as was probable, it should create a repetition of the nightmare, and that he should be sorry for. Having thus formed, and above all, accomplished, his resolution, he dismissed the subject from his thoughts, and proceeded as gayly as ever

And now the sun began to decline and evening to close in Colonel Burton watched the bright orb as it sat behind the distant hills, and then, having lingered till the last streak of gold disappeared behind the horizon, he quickened his pace toward a village which appeared at a little distance, and where, his horse being fatigued, he hoped to obtain quarters for the night. The shades of the evening were falling thick around him as he entered the village, the chill blast of a November night moaned through the trees, it was a lonely place, and the Colonel began to doubt, from its wretchedness of appearance, if it could afford accommodation for himself and his horse At length, he thought he could distinguish a sign post in the distance. He quickened his pace, and soon became convinced that he was approaching some house of entertainment, but, as he came nearer, a slight turn in the road disclosed another object He started, and, for a few moments, felt more than he liked to own, even to himself.

"Was it possible? No, it would not be; the twilight had deceived him" But a few paces convinced him that it was delusion, for exactly opposite his intended lodging stood the village church, with its usual accompaniments of graves and tombstones

His immediate impulse was to pass the house without further hesitation but, recovering from his first surprise, he now began to reason with himself upon the folly and impropriety of suffering his imagination to be so acted upon as to refuse the shelter that was thus offered to him, and which the situation of his horse rendered almost necessary; while, by proceeding, he risked the chance of being benighted in a part of the country entirely unknown to him; and what motive could he assign for acting thus! A dream forsooth! a nightmare occasioned by a disturbed mind or a hearty supper! No, an officer in the British army would not allow himself to be led astray by every turn of a distempered fancy, he would enter the inn

By the time this manly resolution was adopted Colonel Burton had arrived at the place of his destination where, having examined the house his determination began to waver It was situated quite at the extremity of the village, and rather apart from any other habitation, and whether it was really so, or that the distempered state of his nerves influenced his judgment, he knew not, but it certainly appeared to him that the place wore an aspect of seclusion and gloom very unlike the air of cheerful comfort which usually characterises an inn

"It is a mean looking place" said he, "and the accommodation will be wretched."

He looked again at the churchyard and became every moment more strongly convinced of the bad accommodations of its opposite neighbor

It was a miserable place, he doubted, indeed if he should be able to obtain a bed there "It is evidently little more than a common hedge alehouse and it would only be putting them to inconvenience should he attempt to stop

He was startled in his meditations by a dismal sound harsh and discordant.

"A murderer hanging in chains, perhaps"

No, it was only the creaking of the signpost over his head, as the wind impelled it upon its rusty hinge

The owner of the house now came forward—a ferocious looking person with an expression of sullen malignity on his countenance, looking as if he had not been shaved for a month, and his manners if not decidedly uncivil, were so dangerously abrupt that if the traveler a resolution had before begun to falter, the sight of the innkeeper soon overthrew it entirely and having inquired the distance to the nearest town, which he found to be very trifling, Colonel Burton gave the spur to his jaded horse, and the churchyard the gloomy inn, and the ferocious innkeeper were soon left far behind

Fate now seemed determined to atone for her unpropitious treatment, after riding about half a mile the traveler reached a town whose cheerful appearance afforded a contrast the most striking to the lonely village he had just quitted The inn, a pleasant looking place, stood surrounded by other houses, and nothing like a churchyard was to be described Rejoicing in his good fortune, Colonel Burton dismounted and entered the house he was conducted into a room whose naturally pleasant aspect was now heightened by the blaze of a cheerful fire, the attendants were civil, the supper excellent and, as he enjoyed the luxury of his present situation, he blessed the friendly warning, which, by exciting his apprehensions, however unnecessarily, had induced him to change a bad lodging for one so full of comfort and convenience

The evening passed rapidly away, by means of the usual amusement of a solitary night at an inn, eating and yawning; and, at ten o'clock, the Colonel desired to be shown to his apartment As he looked round the pleasant chamber to which he was conducted, his mind again reverted to the lonely inn, and its appearance of desolation and misery, but although acknowledging the superiority of the quarters he had chosen, and never for a moment repenting of his choice, he yet could scarcely help blushing as the events of the day passed in review before him. In his present state of ease and security, his spirits exhilarated and his limbs at rest, he marveled that his mind could have been disturbed, or his actions controlled, by a cause so trivial and childish; and the result of these, his calm meditations, was a secret resolution of never disclosing the circumstance to a single human being.

He now began to prepare himself for bed While he was thus engaged, his attention was attracted by the moon, which, shining in all the lustre of a clear Autumn night, shed a stream of radiance through an aperture of the window curtain Attracted by its beauty, Colonel Burton approached the window to take a more distinct view of the full planet; when, drawing aside the intervening shade, he stood transfixed in shuddering horror, for a cemetery lay before him, where the moon was gleaming white upon the graves and tombstones, with a brilliancy which rendered every object as clear as if he had beheld it by daylight!

For a few moments, he felt completely unnerved, the dream was again before him, and he dwelt upon its strange fulfillment until his blood seemed curdling in his veins, and he turned from the window, unable to endure the ghastly prospect it presented to his view. The loneliness of his situation, the churchyard, all seemed accomplished, all but the dreadful conclusion of the vision.

He looked around him in gloomy despondency, till, overcome by the horrors his imagination conjured up, he resolved to quit the house, and had actually quitted his chamber for that purpose, preferring every alternative to passing the night in his present situation, when the order and quiet which seemed to reign throughout the building, only disturbed at intervals by the laughter of some loiterers at the bar once more recalled him to the absurdity of his apprehension, and chiding himself for his own cowardice, the Colonel returned to his room, with a full determination of driving his dream from his remembrance and sleeping in peace As a proof of his assumed courage, he now advanced boldly to the window, gazed with a steady eye upon the scene without, admired the moon, made a few observations upon the effect of light and shade, and ended by whistling a tune most perseveringly from beginning to end. Still, he did not neglect taking every precaution in his power against the possibility of surprise; he fastened his door carefully, examining every part of the room, and having prepared his pistols, laid them by the side of his bed.

But notwithstanding the firmness of his resolution, he could not think of actually laying down without a slight feeling of awe, nay, he had at one time half determined to pass the night in an arm-chair; which idea, however, he abandoned as too unreasonable to be indulged, and shortly after retired to bed, leaving the light still burning.

Overcome by fatigue, Colonel Burton soon fell asleep, but his slumbers were broken and uneasy, and from these he was at length awakened abruptly by a noise which sounded close to, if not actually within, his chamber. The agitated state of his mind, which all his philosophy had not quite succeeded in calming, rendered every accidental sound a subject of apprehension, and he listened attentively, but all was silent, and he concluded that the disturbance arose from the confusion incident to the departure of some of the guests. His slumbers appeared to have been of some continuance for the light was now expiring, and its pitiful gleam, as the flame rose and fell in the socket, mingled unpleasantly with the broad light of the moon. He was summoning up energy to arise and extinguish it, when he was again startled by the same sound which had awoke him The lamp had given its last faint struggle, like a troubled soul clinging to the life it is about to leave for evil, when another light mingled with the pale moonshine, and the traveler now perceived that it glimmered through a door which had been so concealed that it had entirely escaped observation, but which was now opening slowly and cautiously

Doubting if he was not still under the influence of a dream, Colonel Burton fixed his eyes upon the aperture, which continued gradually to widen, and he soon became aware that he was no longer the sole inhabitant of the chamber. The light, however, would not permit him to discover the number of his adversaries, and being ignorant of how many he had to cope with, he committed himself to the protection of Heaven, and placing his hand upon one of his pistols, remaining perfectly still, awaited the approach of his murderers, with firmness and resolution. They paused and whispered together a few moments, and then with a slow and noiseless step drew near the bed.

There were two men, and the former, as he approached, bidding the other "hold up the lantern," that Colonel perceived its dim light gleaming upon a knife which he held in his hand

They were now within a few paces of the bed, and on the event of that moment depended the fate of the Colonel, and he felt that it did so, and rousing every energy to his assistance, he raised the pistol with a firm hand, when, in the next instant, his antagonist lay weltering in his blood The other immediately flew, and Colonel Burton springing from his bed, found that his aim had been surely taken, the bullet having penetrated the heart of the assassin

In the man he recognized the landlord of the inn

Thus the dream was, in every respect accomplished, and by attending to the mysterious warning it conveyed, the traveler had escaped a dreadful fate, and had executed a just retribution on the murderer

Some years after this, the accomplice who had escaped was brought to justice, and hanged, for a murder committed by himself and his master, many years before in this same house At his death he made open confession not only of the crime for which he suffered, but also of having assisted his master in his attempt to assassinate Colonel Burton, from the commission of which act they were as mysteriously and as providentially prevented. The traveler himself reached his home in safety, though in a maze of gratitude and wonder, and, from that night, continued as may be easily supposed, to the end of his days a devout believer in dreams and visions of all species and descriptions

The "Dead Duck" Speaks

Colonel John W. Forney was serenaded at Washington on the evening of the 27th by the Soldiers' and Sailors' National Union League Colonel Forney made a very caressing speech, in which, after remarking that the present state of things in Washington made him feel as if it were the metropolis of a great slave despotism where Northern men were permitted to live but not to speak their sentiments, he said

"There is not a principle that I have advocated in the Daily Morning Chronicle here, and in the Press at Philadelphia, that has not been taught to us by Andrew Johnson of Tennessee, who taught us that treason was a crime and ought to be punished It was Andrew Johnson who emancipated the slaves in Tennessee by his own will when President Lincoln proposed to exempt that State from his proclamation It was Andrew Johnson who demanded that the splendid property of rebel lords and masters be confiscated and divided among brave men who fought the battles of the country It was Andrew Johnson who promised the colored men of Tennessee that he would be their Moses [laughter] and lead them to the happy land It was Andrew Johnson who not only said that treason was made infamous but that death was too easy a punishment for a traitor It was Andrew Johnson of Tennessee, who, in the Senate of the United States, in 1860 and 1861 in the face of traitors who were then plotting to secede declared that if he were President he would hang them as so many criminals It was Andrew Johnson who led the radical moment before he was President who inspired it with courage, who called upon strong men in the North to follow his example In what you and I are doing we are simply following his example Is it not therefore extraordinary that events such as these transpired, as I that he who has been our leader about to become our persecutor, that in fact you who hold offices in departments are to be punished, sacrificed for being true to his principles? I do not wonder that rebels and returned secessionists of the city of Washington are filled with astonishment at such a prospect, and I would congratulate them upon the fact that they have secured a great prize and were on the eve of a great victory if I did not look to that great North ern country [applause] and see millions of people, who are this night agonizing over the crisis of the Republic and who have resolved, with resolution unparalleled even in our own wonderful history, to sustain their faithful representatives who are deliberating, and thank God with united columns and fearless hearts, in yonder humble pile [Applause]

Why, gentlemen sometimes when I dwell on this theme, I almost feel as though I was transported to another planet It is as if, like Rip Van Winkle, I had slumbered for many years, and had suddenly awakened to find myself in a new community, as it were among my posterity, talking to strangers and looking upon strange faces What is it I see? Andrew Johnson, idol, organ and prattler and protector of men who, during four years, were his persecutors and his revilers Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee, receiving and being introduced to a ragged battalion of returned traitors by the counsels and apologies of the assassins of Abraham Lincoln, and the miserable wretch Wirz, who was executed a few months ago Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee, in front of the Presidential mansion, speaking of loading patriots as traitors! It is indeed a mirage of miracles I do not desire and did not regard your visit as intended to give me an opportunity to reply to the President in words unknown to a gentleman. I am not to imitate manners that have been set by the President of the United States. [Applause] We should not only look to our Chief Magistrate for elegance of manners, but for decency of language We should always find in him eminent sobriety [laughter] of deportment, dignity of expression, unerring courtesy, and graceful language, for, gentlemen, if we look in vain for such in the head of the civilized and Christian nations, where else shall we look for them? If there is anything that eminently characterizes this American people, it is that their intelligence teaches them to respect the rights and feelings of others. From this sentiment springs the noble philanthropy which sacrifices and strengthens the important movement in which they are now engaged; for we are on the threshold not merely of party conflicts, we have before us mighty labors We can no more tear ourselves away from our work, than I can reach out with this feeble arm and tear out one of those stars now sparkling in the eternal heavens He is a most incapable leader who strives to evade and delay eternal truths and duties. Shall four millions of human beings, made free by a great war, and over the graves of their tyrants and our betrayers, be left in moral servitude? You have passed through more dangers, soldiers, and helped to solve and settle more troubles than can be surpassed by any yet unborn, and if we follow God's law, we shall not be lost."

SOMETHING NEW AND NOVEL.—A PATENT APPLIED FOR.—Mr HENDEE has invented an article by which he can take any number of Head Pictures on the same plate without the subject getting up from the chair; can get different positions of the face and all sizes of heads can put a half dozen heads on the space of a half dollar; can put a whole family of heads on a common sized card, and will sell pictures cheaper than any other Gallery on the coast Has the process for taking the new and beautiful style picture called the Porcelain or Sun Pearl, so much talked of in San Francisco, the largest in town from that place who has been making those pictures in San Francisco
